€428.00

Product no.: IN-704910.R1

Frederick the Great, Voltaire, La Mettrie - Adolph von Menzel depicts a conversation of great minds in his famous group portrait of 1750, which was set on fire during the war. He presents the splendour of the marble hall at Sanssouci and the facial features of those at the table with the greatest realism. The painting was painted in 1850.

Original: Oil on canvas, formerly National Gallery Berlin, burnt during the war.

High-quality reproduction in the Fine Art Giclée process, worked by hand on artist's canvas of fine cotton and stretched like an original painting on an adjustable solid wood stretcher frame. The canvas structure is tangible and visible! Limited edition 499 copies. Framed in a handmade, golden solid wood frame. Size 61 x 54 cm (h/w). Exclusively at ars mundi.
