

Necklace "Spiral" - after Friedensreich Hundertwasser

"The spiral lies at that very point where inanimate matter is transformed into life. ... I am convinced, for example, that the act of creation has the nature of a spiral. ... Our earth describes a spiral course, that is we move in circles, but we never come back to the same point. The circle is not closed. We only reach the same level as the point where we began. It is characteristic of a spiral that it seems to be a circle but is not closed. ... The spiral, as I see it, is a vegetative spiral, with swellings, where the lines become thicker and thinner, like the rings of a tree trunk, but with this difference, that they do not lie within one another, but form a coil."
(Friedensreich Hundertwasser, Vienna, 1974)
