

Sculpture "Aesculapian Snake", cast metal

€360.00

Product no.: IN-259099

Before Apollo's health-giving son was placed among the stars as the constellation as Ophiuchos ("The Serpent Holder"), he swum from his Epidaurian pilgrimage temple to Rome in the shape of a serpent, bringing blessings. The reptile writhing upwards on his staff in spiral coils has remained the most striking symbol of medicine to this day. Replica based on an old model from Epidaurus, around 350 BC. Cast metal, height with shell limestone base 23 cm.

Product link: <https://www.arsmundi.de/en/sculpture-aesculapian-snake-cast-metal-259099/>