The American sculptor Calder, who became known and famous for his moving wire sculptures and metal constructions, the so-called Mobiles and Stables, was also a convincing graphic artist. His friends such as Hans Arp or Marcel Duchamps inspired him, and he claimed that he created "Mondrians who move".

Alexander Calder was particularly interested in the free play with forms and colours in his graphics. In this way, the interest in dynamics and geometry of his sculptures and mobiles finds its counterpart on canvas. The cheerfulness, lightness and humour that characterise the rest of his oeuvre can also be discovered in his works on paper.

High-quality screenprint on heavy handmade paper. Noble framing in black satin with Munich gold and passe-partout, dustproof glazed. Size approx. 68 x 88 cm (h/w).
