

Klaus Börner: Wall object "Raven Talks"

Product no.: IN-769146

"An old, already dead tree in front of the setting sun. In the background, only indicated by a fine line, a range of hills. Two ravens are sitting close together as if immersed in a conversation. We can only guess what they are talking about, perhaps it's about who won the sheep race today?

On my walks, I encounter ravens or other corvids almost every day. I can constantly observe something new. They drop walnuts from a great height onto the path or run them over by vehicles to get to the tasty contents as easily as possible. Or they use acrobatic flight manoeuvres to chase away the birds of prey that are raiding their territory. Or they hop around on the sheep that graze our fields in autumn. It looks as if there is a competition to see who is the cheekiest and most audacious. All these observations inspired me to create the object 'Raven Talks'," says Klaus Börner.
