This portrait is one of the most famous of Schiller's works and can be found in a famous spot in the Goethe Museum in Frankfurt, Germany, where it continues to shape our perception of the great poet of Wallenstein to this day. However, it was painted years after Schiller's death. Kügelgen (1772-1820), a friend of Caspar David Friedrich and one of the most important portrait painters of his time, paid his respects to the two great poets of the period in 1808-1809, portraying not only Goethe but also Schiller, who had already died in 1805.
