€620.00

Product no.: IN-371317

A sign of God and symbol of healing power: When the people of Israel had to endure in the desert, some were against God and Moses. God punished the doubters with a plague of snakes. The result: many people died. Moses asked for mercy, and God told him to form an image of a snake and put it on a pole. Whoever was poisoned was healed by the mystical power of the snake and his faith. With this scene from the Old Testament, Michelangelo designed one of the corner scenes of the Sistine Chapel in Rome.

Exclusively at ars mundi, the three-dimensional realisation of the world work of art is available. Edition in polymer cast, hand-gilded with metal leaf. With nickel-plated brass rod and artificial stone base. Height 44.5 cm.
