

Vincent van Gogh: Picture "Willows at Sunset" (1888), framed

Product no.: IN-690889

190 oil paintings and 108 drawings - Vincent van Gogh went into a creative frenzy during his stay in Arles from 21 February 1888 to 3 May 1889, which lasted just over a year. His colour palette noticeably brightened in the literal sense of the word: in numerous letters, he requested and subsequently used the colours chrome yellow, vermillion, Prussian blue and emerald green from his brother Theo, who supported him unswervingly until his death.

A luminous example is his "Willows at Sunset", in which van Gogh sets a row of deep blue pollarded willows in a meadow landscape bathed in red-golden light from the setting sun.

Original: 1888, oil on canvas, Otterlo, Rijksmuseum Kröller-Müller.
