Product no.: IN-725713

Barlach's "Doubter" was created in 1931, when the banning by the Nazis was already imminent. Barlach was repeatedly attacked by National Socialist groups. The figure of the man sunken to his knees and struggling to hold on to his hands reflects distress and perhaps also addresses Barlach's doubts about the humanistic power of his art. But it has its supra-temporal validity as an impressive representation of doubt, insecurity and probably also despair as a human condition.
