

Sculpture "Capitoline Wolf with Romulus and Remus", cast

€980.00

Product no.: IN-445672

The "Lupa Capitolina" is the landmark of Rome and the symbol of power and security - and still represents the fascinating history of the Roman Empire. According to legend, the founding fathers of Rome, the twins Romulus and Remus, were abandoned as children and raised by a wolf. The wolf passed on strength, courage and a fighter's heart to her offspring. The sculptural group stood on the Capitol as a sign of power - and was struck by lightning in 65 BC - as Cicero recounted, "drawn by the gods".
Original: Bronze, Palazzo dei Conservatori, Rome. 5th century BC.

Available for the first time as an inexpensive reduction in captivating quality! Polymer ars mundi museum replica, hand-cast, with hand-bronzed surface. Reduction. Size 30 x 19.5 x 12 cm (w/h/d).

Product link: <https://www.arsmundi.de/en/sculpture-capitoline-wolf-with-romulus-and-remus-cast-445672/>