Vincent van Gogh:
Picture "The Red Vineyard at Arles" (1888), framed

€440.00

Product no.: IN-895701

The fact that Vincent van Gogh was only able to sell one of his pictures during his lifetime is a myth, but he probably sold a few. However, "The Red Vineyard in Arles" is the only one that the selling can be proven. Van Gogh's brother and supporter Theo had noticed how valuable the painting was. Theo expressed his enthusiasm in a letter dated 16 June 1889: "There is a power of colour in all of them that you have not yet achieved," when Vincent sent him the painting along with others. He also informed his brother that the "Red Vineyard" had already found a place in his house.
